Insulation

Insulation describes the products and procedures used to lessen heat transfer between a building's interior and exterior. It contributes to energy conservation, lower heating and cooling costs, and maintenance of a comfortable indoor climate. Walls, floors, roofs, and attics are frequently lined with insulation to reduce heat transfer through these surfaces.

Acoustics

The science of sound and its behaviour in various environments is the subject of acoustics. The goal of acoustics in the context of buildings is to optimise and control the transmission of sound waves in order to produce pleasing acoustics. In areas like concert halls, theatres, recording studios, classrooms, offices, and even residential areas, good acoustic design is crucial.

Sarking & Roofing Blankets

Sarking is a term used to describe a specific kind of protective layer or membrane that is positioned beneath the roofing material to offer additional insulation, weatherproofing, and moisture control. By serving as a barrier against wind, dust, and water infiltration, it increases the roof's overall toughness and efficiency. Typically, synthetic materials like polyethylene or bituminous products are used to create sarking materials. On the other hand, roofing blankets are insulation products made specifically for roofs.
