Title: Develop core life abilities through SEL programs
Description: The future of education is reliant upon social and emotional learning. Social and emotional learning introduces the core aspects of life that indicate how young people adjust to new environments, how they adapt to change and how resilient they will be in life. For an early childhood educator, it is important to teach these skills in school learning environments as we know social and emotional development is vital to children's development. Pathways to Resilience have developed various programs to teach resilience and SEL for all ages. You can browse
